Wellesley "Hams"
Offer Free Classes

A series of free classes designed to help the beginner in short-wave radio communication will be conducted by the Wellesley Amateur Radio Society. Marshall Cannell, President of the W.A.R.S., announced at the November meeting of the club that two separate courses will be taught by club members. The first will begin on Thursday, November 30 and is designed to teach the Federal Communications Commission's basic license requirements to those who are unfamiliar with radio theory. The second will begin on Tuesday, November 28 and will be to help those people who already hold a Novice license and wish to take the FCC examination for a Technician or General Class license.

Wellesley Hams to Meet Tuesday Night

The December meeting of the Wellesley Amateur Radio Society will be held at 7:30 P.M., December 5. The Club meeting room is located in the basement of the Wellesley Hills Branch Library. The Club expects to have a representative of the National Radio Company demonstrate the new National NC-200.

The Club also offers free courses for all those interested in amateur radio. The first will begin tonight, November 30 for those interested in passing the Novice license Examination. The second began on Tuesday, November 28 for those wishing the Technician or General FCC license.

The Wellesley Amateur Radio Society was formed during the Korean War to train radio operators for Civil Defense. A key station in the Wellesley Civil Defense Communications Net is located with an emergency power supply in the club's meeting room in the basement of the Wellesley Hills Branch of the Wellesley Free Library at the intersection of routes 9 and 16.

Those desiring further information may contact Walter Lenk, club secretary, at 237-9289, or come to the Club Room on the night of the class.
